The case of a 69-year-old woman with idiopathic pontine myelinolysis is presented. No history of previous head trauma, drug abuse, alcohol abuse or abuse of other central nervous system stimulants was reported. Clinical features included a 2-week history of a progressive gait disturbance with features of limb ataxia, a diminished sense of smell and a loss of taste. Neurologic examination showed a slight impairment of the cranial nerves (II-XII) and mild ophthalmoplegia. Progression was documented by a lack of rehabilitation effect within 1 month. The treatment with rivastigmine 9 mg/day led to a significant improvement in gait and limb ataxia. Neuropsychological assessment indicated impairment of short-term memory, visuoconstructive, visual perception, constructive apraxia and executive functions. The treatment with rivastigmine 9 mg/day was successful and led to stabilization of mental and cognitive decline within 2 weeks. Although there are few reports of patients with idiopathic pontine myelinolysis who were successfully treated with a cholinester f678ea9f9e
